

Technical Career Institutes

320 West 31st Street
New York, NY 10001
212.594.4000
www.ticcollege.edu

February 18, 2015

Tom Capone

Director of Marketing/Sales, United States Distance Learning Association (USDLA)

Executive Director, New York Distance Learning Association (NYDLA)

501 Main Street #695

Boonton, NJ 07005-0695

Dear Tom:

Technical Career Institutes, also known as TCI College of Technology, would be honored to serve as the host for the New York chapter of the Distance Learning Association. Our academic divisions offer Associate's degree programs in Business and Legal Studies, Health Sciences and Technologies, Engineering and Facilities Technologies, as well as Arts and Sciences. Founded in 1909 under the leadership of Nobel Prize recipient Guglielmo Marconi, TCI was originally a leading center for education and development in the communications industry. Later, the school was propelled forward by graduate David Sarnoff, pioneer of American commercial radio and television, and co-founder of the National Broadcasting Company (NBC). Our rich history leads us to today, as we currently offer hybrid learning options for students to learn on industry standard equipment, combining hands-on classroom time with remote-access Internet assignments.

Your efforts as the executive director of the NY/NJ/CT chapter of USDLA will help bring our educational, government and corporate e-learning efforts to new levels here at TCI College. In particular, we are interested in developing a relationship with Homeland Security in conjunction with our Security Services and Management program, and deepening corporate partnerships that will help our Career Services staff place our students and recent graduates with more internships and entry-level positions. We look forward to working with you later this year on these initiatives. Please let me know if you have additional questions or if I may be of assistance.

Sincerely yours,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read 'Janice Dru', with a long, sweeping underline.

Janice Dru

Director of Marketing

Technical Career Institutes (TCI College)